

INSTRUCTIONS TO CONTRIBUTORS

Articles and book reviews can only be considered for publication in The Studia Philonica Annual if they rigorously conform to the guidelines established by the editorial board as follows:

1. The Studia Philonica Annual accepts articles for publication in the area of Hellenistic Judaism, with special emphasis on Philo and his Umwelt. Articles on Josephus will be given consideration if they focus on his relation to Judaism and classical culture (and not on primarily historical subjects). The languages in which the articles may be published are English, French and German. Translations from Italian or Dutch into English can be arranged at a modest cost to the author.
2. For all general matters of style submissions must conform to the guidelines as set out in The SBL Handbook of Style, Second edition (SBL Press: Atlanta, 2014). Submissions which fail to do this will be returned to the authors.
3. Articles and reviews are to be sent to the editors in electronic form as email attachments. The preferred word processor is Microsoft Word. Users of other word processors are requested to submit a copy exported in a format compatible with Word, e.g., in RTF format. Manuscripts should be double-spaced, including the notes. Words should be italicized when required, not underlined. Quotes five lines or longer should be indented and may be single-spaced. Texts in Greek must be submitted in SBL Greek and texts in Hebrew must be submitted in SBL Hebrew (both available at no cost from the SBL website). In all cases a PDF version of the document must be sent together with the word processing file. No handwritten Greek or Hebrew can be accepted. Authors are requested not to vocalize their Hebrew (except when necessary) and to keep their use of this language to a reasonable minimum. It should always be borne in mind that not all readers of the Annual can be expected to read Greek or Hebrew. Transliteration is permitted for incidental terms. If other language fonts need to be used, the font must be sent with the manuscript or contact should be sought with SBL Press.
4. Authors are encouraged to use inclusive language wherever possible, avoiding terms such as “man” and “mankind” when referring to humanity in general.

5. For the preparation of articles and book reviews the Annual follows the guidelines of the SBL Handbook of Style. Here are examples of how a monograph, a monograph in a series, an edited volume, an article in an edited volume, and a journal article are to be cited in notes (different conventions apply for bibliographies):

Joan E. Taylor, Jewish Women Philosophers of First-Century Alexandria—Philo's 'Therapeutae' Reconsidered (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2003), 123.

Ellen Birnbaum, The Place of Judaism in Philo's Thought: Israel, Jews, and Proselytes, BJS 290, SPhiloM 2 (Atlanta: Scholars Press, 1996), 134.

Gerard P. Luttikhuizen, ed., Eve's Children: The Biblical Stories Retold and Interpreted in Jewish and Christian Traditions, TBN 5 (Leiden: Brill, 2003), 145.

G. Bolognesi, "Marginal Notes on the Armenian Translation of the Quaestiones et Solutiones in Genesim by Philo," in Studies on the Ancient Armenian Version of Philo's Works, ed. Sara Mancini Lombardi and Paola Pontani, SPhA 6 (Leiden: Brill, 2011), 45–50.

James R. Royse, "Jeremiah Markland's Contribution to the Textual Criticism of Philo," SPhiloA 16 (2004): 50–60.

Note that abbreviations are used in the notes and also in bibliographies. Numbers should be given in full for ancient texts, for example, Aet. 107–110; for references to modern publications the conventions of the SBL Handbook of Style should be followed (see p. 18). When joining up numbers in all textual and bibliographical references, the en dash should be used and not the hyphen, that is, 50–60, not 50-60. For publishing houses only the first location is given.

6. The following abbreviations are to be used in both articles and book reviews.

(a) Philonic treatises are to be abbreviated according to the following list. Numbering follows the edition of Cohn and Wendland, using Arabic numbers only and full stops rather than colons (e.g., Spec. 4.123). Note that De Providentia should be cited according to Aucher's edition, and not the LCL translation of the fragments by F. H. Colson.

(c) References to biblical authors and texts and to ancient authors and writings are to be abbreviated as recommended in the SBL Handbook of Style §8.2–3. Note that biblical books are not italicized and that between chapter and verse a colon is placed (but for non-biblical references colons should not be used). Abbreviations should be used for biblical books when they are followed by chapter or chapter and verse unless the book is the first word in a sentence. Authors writing in German or French should follow their own conventions for biblical citations.

(d) For giving dates the abbreviations BCE and CE are preferred and should be printed in regular large caps.

(e) Journals, monograph series, source collections, and standard reference works are to be be abbreviated in accordance with the recommendations listed in The SBL Handbook of Style §8.4. The following list contains a selection of the more important abbreviations, along with a few abbreviations of classical and philosophical journals and standard reference books not furnished in that list.
